MEMORANDUM

I. The Issue:

To be constitutional, a capital statute must genuinely narrow the class of defendants eligible for death and justify the imposition of a more severe sentence on the defendant compared to others convicted of first degree murder. Narrowing may be accomplished by severely restricting the definition of first degree murder or by requiring additional proof of an aggravating factor that distinguishes a defendant as above the norm for first degree murderers. Arizona's capital murder statute broadly defines first degree murder and evidence shows that virtually every first degree murder case has an aggravating factor. Is Arizona's capital murder statute constitutional?

II. Short Answer:

No. Arizona has adopted a sentencing scheme that broadly defines the definition of first degree murder to include all felony murders and premeditated murder and uses aggravating factors to narrow a defendant's eligibility for the death penalty. The aggravating factors are designed to identify those cases where the manner in which the crime was committed or the background of the defendant raise it above the norm for first degree murders. If virtually every first degree murder case has at least one aggravating factor, the statute has no method of meaningfully distinguishing the few cases in which death is deserved from the many cases in which it is not.

III. Analysis:

A capital statute must genuinely narrow the defendants eligible for the death penalty. "To pass constitutional muster, a capital sentencing scheme must 'genuinely

1 narrow the class of persons eligible for the death penalty and must reasonably justify
2 the imposition of a more severe sentence on the defendant compared to others found 3 guilty of murder.’” Lowenfield v. Phelps, 484 U.S. 231, 244 (1988). (See also Zant v.
4 Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 876 (1983)). The narrowing function in the statute segregates
5 the few who may deserve death from the many who do not. “Because the death penalty
6 is the most severe punishment, the Eighth Amendment applies to it with special 7 force...(citations omitted). Capital punishment must be limited to those offenders who 8 commit ‘a narrow category of the most serious crimes’ and whose extreme culpability
9 makes them ‘the most deserving of execution.’” Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 568
10 (2005). (See also State v. Watson, 129 Ariz. 60,63, 628 P.2d 943 (1981)(“We believe 11 that Godfrey v. Georgia, supra, mandates that the death penalty should be reserved for 12 only the most aggravating of circumstances, circumstances that are so shocking and 13 repugnant that the murder stands out above the norm of first degree murders or the 14 background of the defendant sets him apart from the usual murderer.”))

15 A properly narrow statute avoids the arbitrary imposition of death. “Narrowing 16 is not an end in itself and not just any narrowing will suffice. The narrowing must be 17 such that it forecloses the prospect of cruel and unusual punishment from ‘wanton or 18 freakish’ imposition of the death penalty.” U.S. v. Cheely, 36 F.3d 1439, 1445 (9th 19 Circ. 1994).

20 The legislature is not required to narrow the eligibility of the death penalty by 21 using aggravating factors. “The Court noted in Lowenfield v. Phelps (citation omitted) 22 that the requisite narrowing could be accomplished in one of two ways: either ‘[t]he

1 legislature may itself narrow the definition of capital offenses...so that the jury finding
2 of guilt responds to this concern,' or 'the legislature may more broadly define capital 3 offenses and provide for narrowing by jury findings of aggravating circumstances at 4 the penalty phase.'" Cheely, supra, at 1442. In Lowenfield, the Louisiana legislature so 5 narrowly defined first degree murder that the aggravating factors were of little 6 constitutional significance. There, first degree murder was limited to five 7 circumstances where the defendant had the specific intent to kill or inflict great bodily 8 harm and (1) he was committing or attempting to commit aggravated kidnapping, 9 aggravated escape, aggravated arson, aggravated rape, aggravated burglary, armed 10 robbery or simple robbery; (2) the victim was a fireman or policeman performing his 11 duties; (3) the defendant killed more than one person; (4) the defendant received 12 pecuniary gain; or (5) the victim was under the age of 12. Lowenfield at 242. Not even 13 all felony murder was defined as first degree murder. Id. at 241.

14 In Jurek, v. Texas, 428 U.S. 262 (1976), the Supreme Court found sufficient 15 narrowing in a Texas statute that allowed the death penalty only if the murder was 16 committed under five different circumstances: (1) the victim was a police officer or a 17 fireman on duty and the defendant knew it; (2) the defendant committed the murder 18 while committing or attempting kidnapping, burglary, robbery, rape or arson; (3) the 19 defendant committed the murder for pecuniary gain; (4) the defendant was escaping or 20 attempting to escape from prison; or (5) the defendant killed a correctional employee
21 while in prison. The Court said, "While Texas has not adopted a list of statutory 22 aggravating circumstances the existence of which can justify the imposition of the 1 death penalty as have Georgia and Florida, its action in narrowing the categories of 2 murders for which a death sentence may ever be imposed serves much the same

3 purpose.” Jurek at 270.

4 By contrast, the Arizona first degree murder statute includes not only 5 premeditated murder, but also the intentional killing of a police officer and felony 6 murder for 21 different felonies, including transporting for sale of marijuana and 7 felony flight, a class five felony offense. A.R.S. 13-1105. Arizona’s statute, then,
8 broadly defines first degree murder. Its death penalty scheme must use aggravating 9 factors to constitutionally narrow a defendant’s exposure to capital punishment.

10 And it is well settled that the aggravating factors in the Arizona statute were 11 designed to narrow the class of first degree murder cases eligible for the death penalty.
12 State v. Bocharski, 218 Ariz. 476, 488, 189 P.3d 403 (2008). (“[S]tatutory aggravators
13 in Arizona’s death penalty scheme narrow the class of first-degree murderers who are 14 death eligible.”) The intent of the legislature was to obey the constitutional mandate in 15 Furman. In Arizona’s adopted statutory scheme, not every first degree murder case
16 can, constitutionally, be death eligible. “The legislature has made it clear that the death 17 penalty is not to be imposed in every case of first degree murder. The death penalty is 18 reserved for those cases where the manner in which the crime was committed raises it 19 above the norm of first degree murders, or the background of the defendant places the 20 defendant above the norm of first degree murderers.” State v. Blazak, 131 Ariz. 598, 21 604, 643 P.2d 694 (1982).

1           The state has argued repeatedly that it is only the breadth of the individual
2   aggravator that has constitutional ramifications, not the sentencing scheme as a whole.
3   But the narrowing effect of the statute as a whole is of constitutional significance. "We 4   must also bear in mind that Arizona's system of capital sentencing must perform a 5   genuine narrowing function. It is not enough that an aggravating circumstance is 6   determinate; the sentencing scheme must 'genuinely narrow the class of person's 7   eligible for the death penalty.'" (emphasis added), State v. Bible, 175 Ariz. 549, 603,
8   858 P.2d 1152 (1993). (See also Brooks v. State, 104 Md.App. 203, 655 A.2d 1311, 9   1320 (1995)("[T]he capital sentencing scheme must be reviewed in its entirety to 10   determine whether the necessary narrowing has occurred.")

11           The State argued that if they can find one first degree murder case that doesn't 12   have an aggravator, the statute is constitutional. But the statutory scheme must 13   effectively winnow out the most egregious cases for which death is an appropriate 14   sentence. It should be the more unusual first degree murder case that is eligible for 15   death. A little incidental narrowing is not constitutionally sufficient. In McConnell v.
16   State, 120 Nev. 1043, 102 P.3d 606 (2004), the defendant was convicted of felony 17   murder and the state sought to make him death eligible by a finding that the crime was 18   committed in the course of or flight from the felony that formed the basis of his felony
19   murder conviction. The Court noted that Nevada's statute, like Arizona's, broadly 20   defined first degree murder. Id. at 1065. It distinguished Lowenfield because the 21   Louisiana statute narrowly defined first degree murder and as a result, the aggravating 22   factors were of little constitutional significance. The Court said allowing the state to 1 aggravate based on factors that formed the basis of his felony murder conviction was 2 insufficiently narrow. "The question is, in a case of felony murder, does either of these 3 two aggravators 'genuinely narrow the class of persons eligible for the death penalty

4 and...reasonably justify the imposition of a more severe sentence on the defendant
5 compared to others found guilty of murder?' We conclude that the narrowing capacity
6 of the aggravators is largely theoretical." Id. at 1067. (See also State v. Martinez, 210
7 Ariz. 578, at Fn 5, 115 P.3d 618 (2005). In McConnell, the Court not only prohibited 8 using as aggravation the facts of the underlying felony that formed the basis of the 9 felony murder charge, in an ongoing course of conduct involving multiple felonies, the 10 state was forbidden from using one felony to establish felony murder and another to 11 prove aggravation. McConnell at 1069-70.

12 Other Courts have struggled with the issue of whether a capital sentencing 13 scheme was sufficiently narrow. In U.S. v. Cheely, supra, the Ninth Circuit found the 14 federal mail bombing statute unconstitutional because the statute permitted the death 15 penalty while insufficiently narrowing the class of defendants for whom death was an 16 option. The Court compared two scenarios: in the first, a defendant sent an explosive 17 to his friend to blow up the college football stadium to protest the predominance of 18 athletics over academics but the bomb blew up en route and killed an innocent 19 bystander. In the second example, a paid assassin sent a mail bomb and killed an 20 NAACP leader. The first jury might impose a death sentence while the second jury 21 could sentence the defendant to life. The Court said, "The prospect of such 'wanton'
22 and 'freakish' death sentencing is intolerable under Furman and the cases following

1 it...[The statutes] create the potential for impermissibly disparate and irrational 2 sentencing because they encompass a broad class of death eligible defendants without 3 providing guidance to the sentencing jury on how to distinguish among them.” Cheely
4 at 1444.

5 Cheely is important because it utterly defeats the state’s contention that 6 aggravators merely have to be understood by the jury. In Cheely, the statute simply 7 fails to identify those truly deserving of the sentence of death resulting in the 8 possibility of the arbitrary and freakish imposition of the death penalty.

9 Arizona’s statute is similarly flawed. For example: a defendant is on probation 10 for possession of marijuana, a class six open offense. He has not been reporting to his 11 probation officer and he knows that a petition to revoke his probation has been filed.
12 He believes a warrant has been issued for his arrest. When he sees an officer behind 13 him attempt to pull him over, he flees, a car chase ensues and a motorist along the 14 route has an accident trying to avoid the defendant’s fleeing car and is killed. Felony 15 flight is an enumerated felony under the felony murder statute. That a defendant is on 16 probation is an aggravating factor. The defendant is eligible for the death penalty.
17 Clearly this example is not above the norm of first degree murders. In many states it 18 wouldn’t be murder at all. Yet under this overly inclusive statute, it is a capital offense.
19 The state did file a Notice of Intent to Seek the Death Penalty in State v. Szymanski, 20 where the defendant is alleged to have been impaired, drove the wrong way on the 21 highway and killed another driver. (See exhibit 1).

1 In Engberg v. Meyer, 820 P.2d 70 (Wyoming 1991) the Wyoming Supreme 2 Court would not permit the state to use as an aggravating factor elements of the 3 underlying felony in a felony murder case. The Court said, "This statute provided no
4 requirements beyond the crime of felony murder itself to narrow and appropriately
5 select those to be sentenced to death and therefore on its face permitted arbitrary
6 imposition of the death penalty. This statutory scheme of death sentencing preserved in 7 felony murder [is] the very evil condemned and held unconstitutional in Furman v.
8 Georgia." (citations omitted) Engberg at 89. The Court distinguished Lowenfield
9 because the Louisiana statute narrowed a defendant's eligibility by narrowly defining 10 first degree murder.

11 In Brooks v. State, 104 Md.App. 203, 655 A.2d 1311 (1995), the Maryland
12 Court of Special Appeals refused to find that duplicative consideration of the 13 underlying felony for both guilt and aggravation was unconstitutional. Examining the 14 statute in its entirety for narrowing features, it found that the statute had adequate 15 protections because (1) the statute limited the felonies that could be considered first 16 degree murder; (2) some felony murder offenses did not have an automatic aggravator;
17 (3) only principals in the first degree could be sentenced to death; that is, a defendant
18 who did not actually kill was not eligible for the death penalty; (4) the statute creates a 19 risk that death will be inflicted in an arbitrary manner but the risk is not substantial;
20 and (5) the Court exercised independent review in deciding whether the aggravating 21 factors outweighed the mitigating factors and whether the sentence was imposed under 22 the influence of passion, prejudice or any other arbitrary factor. The Court found that

1 the statute gave adequate protection against the arbitrary imposition of the death
2 penalty. Id. at 1323.

3 Of course in Arizona, non-principles in felony murder are eligible for the death
4 penalty. Mr. Gittens did not kill or shoot anyone and the state seeks the death penalty
5 against him. And the Arizona Supreme Court no longer independently reviews a death
6 sentence, it no longer weighs aggravating factors and mitigating factors and it permits 7 the sentence of death unless there is an abuse of discretion.

8 In State v. Middlebrooks, 840 S.W.2d 317 (Tenn. 1992), the Court found the 9 Tennessee death penalty statute insufficiently narrow when it allowed elements of the 10 felony murder to act as aggravating factors. The Court quoted from Collins v.
11 Lockhart, 754 F.2d 258 (8th Circ. 1985).<sup>1</sup> “ ‘An aggravating circumstance is an 12 objective criterion that can be used to distinguish a particular defendant on whom the 13 jury has decided to impose the death sentence from other defendants who have 14 committed the same underlying capital crime. Aggravating circumstances serve to 15 reduce the danger that the death penalty will be wantonly or arbitrarily imposed, a 16 danger that was uppermost in the Court’s mind when Furman v. Georgia... was 17 decided. We see no escape from the conclusion that an aggravating circumstance 18 which merely repeats an element of the underlying crime cannot perform this 19 narrowing function.’” Middlebrooks at 345-6. Because Tennessee had a broad 20 definition of murder, no narrowing occurred under Tennessee’s first degree murder

22 <sup>1</sup> The Court notes that Collins was deemed overruled by Lowenfield v. Phelps because Arkansas statute statute. (See also State v. Cherry, 298 N.C. 86, 257 S.E.2nd 551 (1979), where the Supreme Court of North Carolina refused to permit the state to submit aggravating circumstances based on the underlying felony in a felony murder case).
23 sufficiently narrowed the definition of capital murder. Middlebrooks at fn 8.

In support of its argument and on page five of its brief, the state quotes from Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153 (1976) at 192 and emphasizes this language from the opinion: "...the problem will be alleviated if the jury is given guidance regarding the factors about the crime and the defendant that the state, representing organized society, deems particularly relevant to the sentencing decision." But this quote in Gregg is in the context of a discussion on the merits of bifurcating the trial so that information relevant to sentencing is kept from the jury in the guilt phase. This quote is about sentencing factors, not the narrowing function of aggravators. See discussion in Gregg at 190-193.

The state, again citing Gregg, argues that so long as a capital sentencing scheme requires the finding of one aggravating factor that relates to the circumstances of the crime or the character of the defendant, it is constitutional. State's brief at page 6. Gregg said no such thing. In Gregg, the Court held that the death penalty is not per se unconstitutional. The statute found constitutional by the Court in Gregg provided for a bifurcated trial. The statute required that, after a finding of guilt, the trier of fact must find one of ten aggravating factors. Gregg at Fn 9. After a sentence of death was imposed, the trial judge had to complete a six and a half page questionnaire detailing information about the crime, the quality of the defendant's representation, whether race played a part, and whether there was doubt about the defendant's guilt or the appropriateness of the sentence. The statute required that the case receive expedited review from the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court determined whether the sentence was imposed under the influence of passion or prejudice or any other arbitrary factor; whether the evidence supported the aggravators, and whether the sentence was excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases. If the Court affirmed the sentence, it had to include in its decision references to similar cases that it considered. Gregg at 166-67. It is this detailed statute, with its many bulwarks against the arbitrary imposition of death, that the Court found constitutional.

The state cites Tuilaepa v. California, 512 U.S. 967 (1994) in support of its argument. But the issue in Tuilaepa was whether three special circumstances in the penalty phase were vague. In California, sentencing a defendant to death in a first degree murder case requires a three step process. First, a defendant must be found guilty of first degree murder. Then, the jury had to find a special circumstance justifying the sentence of death—Cal.Penal Code Ann. §190.2. If the jury found one or more of these special circumstances, the defendant was eligible for the death penalty and the case then move to the penalty phase where the jury considered specified factors to determine if the death penalty was warranted. Cal Penal Code Ann. §190.3. The issue in Tuilaepa was whether three of the factors in §190.3 were unconstitutionally vague. Tuilaepa at 969. Tuilaepa discusses aggravators in passing. It is not an aggravating factors case. It does not support the state's argument.

A capital sentencing scheme must genuinely narrow the defendants eligible for the death penalty and reasonably justify the imposition of a capital sentence on a defendant compared with others found guilty of first degree murder. In Arizona's capital sentencing scheme, virtually every first degree murder case has at least one aggravating factor. The statute has no method of meaningfully distinguishing the few cases in which death is deserved from the many in which it is not. The statute is unconstitutional.

Defendant's Attorney:
Defendant:	Present
Court Reporter:	Elva Cruz-Lauer

LET THE RECORD REFLECT defendant was sentenced to death in Count 1 in this matter by separate minute entry.

Count(s) 2: The Defendant was found guilty after a trial by jury.

SUPERIOR COURT OF ARIZONA
MARICOPA COUNTY

CR2003-024938-001 DT

05/18/2007

IT IS THE JUDGMENT of the Court Defendant is guilty of the following:

OFFENSE: Count 2: Kidnapping
Class 2 Dangerous Felony
A.R.S. § 13-1304, -1301, -301, -302, -303, -304, -701, -702, -702.01, -801 and -604(P)
Date of Offense: February 26, 2002
Dangerous pursuant to A.R.S. § 13-604 - Non Repetitive

AS PUNISHMENT, IT IS ORDERED Defendant is sentenced to a term of imprisonment and is committed to the Arizona Department of Corrections as follows:

Count 2: 12 year(s) from May 18, 2007
Presentence Incarceration Credit: 1,345 day(s)
Aggravated
Sentence is concurrent with Count 1 of this cause.

This Court must determine whether the sentence for Count 2 shall run concurrent or consecutive to the sentence imposed by the jury for Count 1. Because of that fact, and because the Supreme Court has independent jurisdiction to reconsider a death penalty sentence, this Court will make some findings that may assist the Supreme Court.

When this case was originally filed, there were four defendants. When this case was originally filed, the State filed a notice of death penalty against each of the four defendants alleging cruelty, heinous and depravity. That decision, as the law mandates, was a decision unilaterally made by the County Attorney.

As the law allows, the County Attorney made unilateral decisions to plead out Mr. Johnson, the man who, under the State's theory of the case, batted the victim to death or to near death. In doing so, the County Attorney, as he is authorized to do, unilaterally withdrew the notice of death penalty as to Mr. Johnson.

As the law allows, the County Attorney made a unilateral decision to plead out Ms. Nelson, the co-defendant who procured the murder. But for her conduct, even under the State's theory of the case, there would be no murder. In doing so, the County Attorney, as he is authorized to do, unilaterally withdrew the notice of death penalty as to Ms. Nelson.

MARICOPA COUNTY

CR2003-024938-001 DT

05/18/2007

The County Attorney, as the law allows, made a unilateral decision not to withdraw the death notice for Mr. Bearup, a defendant who, even under the State's theory of the case, did not cause the physical death of Mr. Mathis. Under the State's theory of the case, Mr. Bearup acted only as support for Mr. Johnson as he baseball batted Mr. Mathis to death or to near death, and helped drag Mr. Mathis to a car trunk and the desert. Under the State's theory, Mr. Bearup's act of cutting off Mr. Mathis' ring finger while cruel and heinous, was not a cause of the death.

The County Attorney may argue that the decision for the death penalty was the jury's decision, but in this instance, that was not true. Mr. Bearup made a decision not to present any mitigation. So this jury, like this Court, was bound to follow the law, which in effect was a directed verdict for a death penalty sentence.

The Court believes that Mr. Bearup was correctly prosecuted and convicted for the felony murder.

The Court believes that the jurors' verdict for Count 1 was based upon the facts presented and the law given to them.

This Court, nonetheless, finds that Mr. Bearup's death penalty sentence for Count 1 was not justified in the context of the relative responsibility of the co-defendants whom the County Attorney chose to withdraw the notices of death and reduce their sentencing range.

It is the County Attorney's motto that "let justice be done." This, of course, coincides with a prosecutor's unique ethical responsibility. This Court finds that justice was not done for Mr. Bearup in Count 1.

This Court leaves to the Supreme Court the ramifications of these findings.

IT IS ORDERED authorizing the Sheriff of Maricopa County to deliver the Defendant to the Arizona Department of Corrections to carry out the term of imprisonment set forth herein.

IT IS ORDERED the Clerk of the Superior Court remit to the Arizona Department of Corrections a copy of this Order or the Order of Confinement together with all presentence reports, probation violation reports, and medical and psychological reports that are not sealed in this cause relating to the Defendant.

Mr. Delozier having previously been withdrawn as counsel of record for this defendant in this matter,

CR2003-024938-001 DT

05/18/2007

IT IS ORDERED appointing The Public Defender's Office to appoint counsel to represent the defendant for appeal purposes in this matter.

3:00 a.m. Matter concludes.

ISSUED: Order of Confinement - Certified Copy to DOC via MCSO
